RECEIVED ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
HONORING VISITING PRIME MINISTER IMRAN KHAN JUNE 16, 1998

RECEIVED ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
JUNE 16, 1998

It is both a pleasure and a privilege to be your host at this luncheon in your honor, at the start of your first official visit to the United States. As you will no doubt ever rings together many old friends of Pakistan. We you will make many more new friends for your entry during the course of what we hope will be a ay.

Shah

Mr. Prime Minister, over the past seven years Pakistan and the United States have built a vital, cooperative relationship. We have worked together to deal with which we share a strong and abiding interest:

"It's... First Setting Stage for the Asian Century"

- countering the threat to South and Southeast Asia from Soviet aggression in Afghanistan,
- promoting peace, stability, and democracy in South Asia,
- preventing the further spread of nuclear weapons, and
- combating the worldwide scourge of narcotic trafficking.

Although we have made significant progress in all of these areas, we still have important work to do. I draw confidence from our very productive discussions with you today that we will succeed in making this visit and beyond in moving forward together.
